FOI 14327 RESPONSE

The data is in respect of marked police vehicles for the Essex Police Roads Policing Unit.

The attached information is information that can be retrieved within the cost limits set under the FOI act - Essex Police can provide details of the make, model and vehicle registration of the vehicles

No further details in respect of unmarked or covert vehicles will be provided by virtue of Section 24 National Security and Section 31 (1) Law Enforcement

Essex Police neither confirms nor denies that it holds any other information relevant to the types of vehicles and call signs by virtue of the following exemptions

- S24(2) National Security;
- S31(1) Law Enforcement.

Sections 24 and 31 are prejudice based qualified exemptions and there is a requirement to articulate the harm that would be caused in confirming or denying that the information is held as well as carrying out a public interest test.

Overall harm for the NCND

To disclose details of vehicles and where they are based could subsequently harm the ability of the police service to protect the public it serves and could prejudice its ability to perform core functions. Any release under the Freedom of Information Act is a disclosure to the world, not just to the individual making the request. To confirm or not that any other information is held pertinent to this request would undermine the security of the national infrastructure.

Factors favouring confirming or denying for Section 24

The information simply relates to national security and disclosure would not actually harm it. The public are entitled to know how public funds are spent and by disclosing this information the public would be able to see where public money is being spent.

In the current financial climate of cuts and with the call for transparency of public spending this would enable improved public debate.

Factors against confirming or denying for Section 24

Security measures are put in place to protect the community that we serve. As evidenced within the harm to confirm whether any other information is held pertinent to this request would highlight to terrorists and individuals intent on carrying out criminal activity who and what information is shared with other forces, commercial businesses and law enforcement agencies.

Taking into account the current security climate within the United Kingdom, no information (such as the citing of an exemption which confirms any other information pertinent to this request is held, or conversely, stating 'no information held') which may aid a terrorist should be disclosed. To what extent this information may aid a terrorist is unknown, but it is clear that it will have an impact on a force's ability to monitor terrorist activity.

Irrespective of what other information is or isn't held, the public entrust the Police Service to make appropriate decisions with regard to their safety and protection and the only way of reducing risk is to be cautious with what is placed into the public domain.

The cumulative effect of terrorists gathering information from various sources would be even more impactful when linked to other information gathered about terrorism. The more information disclosed over time will give a more detailed account of the tactical infrastructure of not only a force area but also the country as a whole. Any incident that results from such a disclosure would by default affect National Security.

Section 31 – Law Enforcement

Factors favouring complying with Section 1(1)(a) confirming that information is held

Confirming or denying that any information exists relevant to this request would lead to a better informed public. Confirmation that information exists relevant to this request would lead to a better informed public which demonstrates complete openness and transparency.

Factors against complying with Section 1(1)(a) neither confirming nor denying that information is held

The Police Service will never disclose information which could identify investigative activity and therefore undermine their investigations. To do so would hinder the prevention or detection of crime.

Balancing Test

The points above highlight the merits of confirming or denying the requested information exists. The Police Service is charged with enforcing the law, preventing and detecting crime and protecting the communities we serve. As part of that policing purpose, information is gathered which can be highly sensitive relating to high profile investigative activity.

Weakening the mechanisms used to monitor any type of criminal activity, and specifically terrorist activity would place the security of the country at an increased level of danger.

In addition, any disclosure by Essex Police that places the security of the country at risk, no matter how generic, would undermine any trust or confidence individuals have in us, therefore, at this moment in time it is our opinion that for these issues the balance test favours neither confirming nor denying that any other information is held.

No inference can be drawn from this refusal that information is or isn't held.
